Argos in Cappadocia, Turkey

Do you know which walls apart castles and villas can tell a history? Walls of monasteries. Travelers found there shelters and soldiers waited out sieges. However, many monasteries have been destroyed in modern times. Luckily, master architect Turgut Cansever spent 20 years reconstructing walls of this ancient monastery in Cappadocia.

In argos in Cappadocia the remains of historical dwellings have been carefully restored. Paying tribute to traditional accommodation all rooms were decorated with stone and wood details. Deluxe rooms have a terrace and Splendid Suites feature a private indoor pool. Besides, the hotel has a villa with 2 suites and an outdoor pool.

Seki restaurant is famous with its naturally grown products and a cellar, which dates back 1,300 years and is the largest in Turkey, housing a collection of 22,000 bottles from the Argos Vineyards.
